Mall shooting victim has gang links

Toronto Eaton Centre.

Police zero in on suspect in gun rampage that killed one, injured seven

The investigation into a deadly shooting rampage that set off a mass panic at Toronto's Eaton Centre focused Sunday on one man police said they believe was behind the brazen attack.

Police said little about the gunman, but confirmed their initial theory that the Saturday-evening shooting — which killed one man and injured seven other people — was targeted. They said at least one of the victims had gang ties.

The man who was killed, identified as Ahmed Hassan, 24, of Toronto, is believed to have gang links, police said. They did not elaborate on the suspect they are looking for, saying they did not want to influence first-hand accounts still pouring in a day after the attack.

Seven people suffered either gunshot wounds or injuries in the panicked stampede for the exits when the gunfire erupted. Among them was a 13-year-old boy who was shot in the head and remained in critical condition on Sunday, though police said he's speaking. A 28-year-old pregnant woman who was trampled as people rushed the exits was recovering in hospital. THE CANADIAN PRESS

UWO wins big in federal auto-research funding

Health sciences & engineering. Trio of research projects funded by AUTO21

JULIAN UZIELLI

Three automotive research projects at Western University have been given the green light to partake in a $22-million research initiative.

The projects, focusing on health sciences and engineering, are part of a group of 40 automotive research projects at universities across Canada that were awarded the collective sum last week by AUTO21, a national research initiative supported by the federal government. Nearly 200 academic researchers across Canada will take part in the 40 projects.

Western engineering professor Xianbin Wang was among the researchers awarded funding. His research project, co-led by engineering professor Weiming Shen, focuses on making factory automation safer and more efficient. Their work received $242,250 in funding. Wang said his research aims to help increase the productivity and profitability of Canada's auto industry.

"The project builds on earlier

AUTO21 research ... to design and develop highly reliable, secure and energy-efficient wireless sensor networks that provide and support automated and real-time decision-making capabilities in Canada's automotive factory automation systems," he said in an email.

Other research from Western funded by the initiative includes a study of safe driving in older adults, led by health sciences professor Janice Polgar; and research in computational tools for magnesium die-casting, led by engineering professor Jeffrey Wood.

The funding was announced by Gary Goodyear, Minister of State, Science and Technology, at the AUTO21 conference in Montreal last week. "The ideas, products and technologies generated by these AUTO21-funded research projects will create jobs and businesses, help develop highly skilled people, strengthen our economy and improve the long-term competitiveness of our Canadian automotive industry," he said.

Violent crimes. Police investigating two homicides, stabbing

A 28-year-old woman is facing assault and weapons charges following the latest in a series of violent crimes in the city.

Police allege Londoner Angilee Kinghorn stabbed a woman in the chin and stomach with a kitchen knife about 6 p.m. Saturday near Maitland and Simcoe streets. The stabbing happened during an argument. The victim sustained two one-inch cuts and has been released from hospital, police say.

The stabbing comes days after police investigated the city's third and fourth homicides of the year.

Jonathon Zak, 29, of London, was found shot to death Thursday morning along a path off Victoria Drive. No arrests have been made.

In a separate incident, Jared McKnight, 19, of London, died Thursday evening in hospital, about two hours after being stabbed during a fight near Adelaide Street and Hamilton Road.

Perry Eggett, 22, of London, has been charged with second-degree murder.

Western throwing a party for rare astronomical event

Telescopes. Western University is putting together a viewing party for Tuesday's infrequent Venus transit

JOHN MATISZ
john.matisz@metronews.ca

Although organizers can't guarantee it's a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, this is about as close it gets.

Western University's department of physics and astronomy is hosting a viewing party, starting at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, for the much-anticipated Venus transit. It'll be the first time since 2004 when people worldwide can see the planet pass directly between the sun and the Earth.

It will also most likely be people's last chance: The next transit of its kind is projected to occur 105.5 years down the road.

"A Venus transit is extremely rare," said Western professor Jan Cami, adding that a pair of transits come along every 100-plus years in eight-year intervals. "The next opportunity for humanity to see this is in 2117. That's past our lifetime, so it's a can't-miss event."

Understanding the novelty of the situation is not rocket science, says Cami, a former NASA employee.

Since the orbit of Venus is tilted as it relates to the Earth's orbit around the sun, an illusion is created that moves it above or below the sun from the world's point of view. On Tuesday, Venus will appear as a black dot maneuvering from one side of the sun to the other.

Western's clan of astronomers — the second largest group in the Canadian university community — expect 500 to 1,000 people to stop by to witness the historic event.

Not only will they be broadcasting a live-stream of the transit from the island of Hawaii, but the public will be allowed to watch the show through a handful of telescopes. A "planet walk" modelling the solar system, and focusing on Venus, will also be incorporated.

Solar eyeglasses will be distributed to attendees of the viewing party, eliminating safety concerns.

"Nobody should ever look at the sun without proper protection," Cami said. "Sunglasses don't count."

Bethany's Hope looks to strike it 'rich'

In the midst of a Facebook share trading frenzy, the social network is quietly being utilized as a unique fundraising vehicle.

Local charity Bethany's Hope Foundation is one of 18 non-profit organizations across the continent participating in The Richness Project, presented by Scotiabank.

The initiative encourages North Americans to post precious "everyday moments" to TheRichnessProject.com through Facebook's easy-to-use uploading system. Whether it's a shot of you and your dad fishing, a spontaneous picture of laughing friends, or a simple family portrait, each uploaded photo results in a $1 donation to a charity of your choice.

"It's just so easy to get involved in this project," Bethany's Hope president Dave McIntyre said.

Suspect in dismemberment slaying spotted in France

Interpol. Le Figaro newspaper says police used suspect's cellphone activity to map partial itinerary

The suspect in the gruesome killing and dismemberment of a Chinese student in Montreal was spotted in France over the weekend, but police aren't ruling out the possibility he could still be on the move.

Police spokesman Ian Lafreniere cautioned that Luka Rocco Magnotta may no longer be in France, and wouldn't rule out the possibility he had since returned to Canada or headed elsewhere in Europe.

"He can travel, he's someone who has been known to travel, so we're not taking any chances and we want to keep an open mind," Lafreniere said. "We've received more than 360 tips, it's huge, people really want to help."

Magnotta, 29, is wanted in the gruesome slaying of Jun

Lin, 33, who was a student at Montreal's Concordia University. Lin's torso was found in a suitcase that had been left out for garbage collection outside Magnotta's Montreal apartment last week. Other severed body parts, including a hand and a foot, were mailed to the offices of political parties in Ottawa.

French media reported Sunday that personal belongings of the porn actor were found in a hotel in suburban Paris. The reports said police discovered pornographic magazines as well as air sickness bags.

Police believe Magnotta fled to France on May 26.

Interpol has issued an international alert out for Magnotta, who was born Eric Clinton Newman and has also used the name Vladimir Romanov. Pictures posted Sunday on Magnotta's page on the Interpol website show a man with dark hair and a black Mickey Mouse shirt passing through airport security. The airport wasn't identified.

Crowds celebrate Queen

The River Thames became a royal highway Sunday, as Queen Elizabeth II led a motley, but majestic flotilla of more than 1,000 vessels in a waterborne pageant to mark her Diamond Jubilee.

In a colourful salute to the island nation's maritime past, an armada of skiffs and sailboats, rowboats and paddle steamers joined a flower-festooned royal barge down a 11-kilometre stretch of London's river.

With a crowd of rain-soaked spectators estimated by organizers at 1.25 million cheering from the riverbanks, the pageant was the largest public event in four days of celebrations of the monarch's 60 years on the throne. On Monday, the queen will join thousands of revellers at an outdoor concert beside Buckingham Palace, headlined by pop royalty including Paul McCartney and Elton John.

Sunday was dismal and damp, with rain scuttling plans for a ceremonial fly past, but that didn't stop Union Jack-waving spectators forming a red, white and blue wave along the pageant route.

"We have come prepared," said 57-year-old Christine Steele. "We have got blankets, brollies (umbrellas), flags and bunting. We even got our glittery Union Jack hats and wigs."

Buffett hopes lunch auction raises big bucks

It's true that Warren Buffett hired the hedge fund manager who won the last two private lunches with him that are part of an annual auction, but he doesn't expect the event to become a recruiting tool for Berkshire Hathaway.

Rather, Buffett says it's miraculous that he found one of Berkshire's two new investment managers through the lunch. He offered Ted Weschler a job after he'd paid nearly $5.3 million over two years to dine with Buffett.

Buffett said he just hopes the 13th annual online auction will again raise a significant amount of money for the Glide Foundation, which provides social services to the poor and homeless in San Francisco. Bidding begins Sunday on eBay and continues into Friday evening. Most of the big bids tend to arrive late in the auction.

Interest rate hike? Experts think not

Economic outlook.

Friday's report on Canadian GDP showed a 1.9 per cent growth, well below the central bank's April call for a 2.5 per cent advance

Is the next move for Mark Carney to cut interest rates?

The question would have seemed unthinkable a few weeks ago given that the Bank of Canada governor's last pronouncement on the subject was to issue a wink and a nudge about coming hikes.

The signal-sending language — "some modest withdrawal of the present considerable monetary policy surplus may be appropriate" — contained in the April interest-setting statement sent markets into speculation hyper-drive that rates could be heading north as early as the summer. Tuesday's upcoming announcement was never in play and isn't in play now.

Economists are as unanimous as can be that Carney will keep the policy rate moored at

Economy

Carney's previous signal on interest rates was predicated on the assumption that Canada's growth rate would smoothly expand at about 2.5 per cent throughout 2012, enabling the economy to return to full capacity in the first half of 2013.

one per cent a little while longer. But now the speculation has turned full circle about the nature of the next move, whenever it comes.

"The state of the world is increasingly making clear that a rate hike at this point would be premature," said Avery Shenfeld, chief economist with CIBC World Markets.

The revived crisis in Greece, the growing banking crisis in Spain, unresolved debt problems in Italy and Portugal, had already lengthened the odds on Carney moving this fall, and likely made him regret his April assessment that Europe's crisis had moved from "the acute to the chronic." ## Walmart draws stars

Robson Walton, left, chairman of the board of directors of Walmart and son of the late Walmart founder Sam Walton, greets actor Justin Timberlake during the Walmart shareholders' meeting held in the basketball arena at the University of Arkansas Friday. Timberlake hosted the event, arriving in a hula skirt to symbolize a story told about the founder dancing a hula on Wall Street after losing a bet. # 'CRAZY IDEA' COMES TO FRUITION FROM BEAL FIRST NATIONS STUDENTS

URBAN COMPASS
Todd Devlin
london@metronews.ca

Robyn Turgeon says the event was born out of a "crazy idea" she had in her living room one weekend in early January. But it will all come to fruition today, as former NHL star

Theoren Fleury is set to speak at Centennial Hall in an event presented by Our Shared Vision, an education initiative that supports First Nations, Métis and Inuit (FNMI) students in the Thames Valley District School Board.

FNMI students from H.B. Beal Secondary School will portage a canoe they've spent months building and meet Fleury at 5 p.m. at city hall. At 7 p.m., the former hockey star will take the stage and share his message of hope and strength to an audience of more than 1,500.

"We decided to go very high-profile and bring in a big-name role model," said Turgeon, the FNMI education advisor at the Thames Valley board. "Theo was a perfect choice. He is a victor in every sense of the word, and his message has the power to really affect an audience from all walks of life."

In his bestselling memoir, Playing with Fire, Fleury, who is Métis, disclosed that he was a victim of sexual abuse during his junior hockey playing days. He subsequently dealt with substance abuse issues during a career in which he won both a Stanley Cup and an Olympic gold medal.

Prior to Fleury's presentation, entitled Don't Quit Before the Miracle, today's event will be kicked off with performances by local FNMI dancers, drummers, and singers. Those in attendance will also get a chance to see the canoe that the peer leadership class at H.B. Beal Secondary School built this semester.

For Turgeon, the opportunity to be involved in putting together such an important event for FNMI students is extremely meaningful. A First Nations individual herself (Sagamok Anishinawbek), Turgeon understands the importance of identifying with one's native culture, especially since she didn't do so until later in life.

"I was born and raised in Tillsonburg, and I grew up very disconnected from my culture as it really wasn't talked about in school or in the community," she said.

But that is not the case, Turgeon says, for students in Thames Valley today.

"It is an awesome time to be an FNMI student. Our students are proud of who they are. And now, more than ever before, we are seeing overwhelming interest from non-aboriginal staff and students in FNMI culture and history."

Planning for the event certainly took a lot of work, but Turgeon says when she sees Thames Valley students participating collectively in Our Shared Vision events, it makes all the time and effort worth it.

"Honestly, this is what it is all about for me," she said.

The majority of tickets to today's event, which is free to the public, have already been scooped up. But there may be a few left. To find out, those interested in attending should email: OurSharedVision@tvdsb.on.ca.

Tree planters ensure city lives up to its name

News Worth Sharing

Media will always have to report on the tough stuff. But we know that Canada is full of compassionate individuals, inspiring projects and stories worth celebrating. Here's just one.

If a city is named Forest City, it better deliver. London's citizens care about their city enough to ensure it does.

On May 5, more than 50 residents could be seen at Mitches Park on Upper Queen Street working hard to green their beloved Forest City. It was one busy day of tree planting, but thanks to their efforts, London is now 400 trees greener.

The event was organized by the Canadian Automobile Association (CAA) South Central Ontario in conjunction with Trees Ontario.

The CAA sponsored eight community planting events organized by Trees Ontario across the province.

Organizers were pleased with the outcome, and are looking forward to future tree planting events in London.

"They were very committed to the planting, and the majority of people stayed right until the end of the day to ensure that all the trees got in the ground," said Brooke McClelland of Trees Ontario.

"We appreciate how dedicated the group was, and how excited they were about what they were doing."

Corey Hart's comeback a point of 'pride' for singer

Remix. Sunglasses at Night singer gets inspired to remake Truth Will Set You Free and bring its gay-positive message to the forefront

If you go...

- The performance. Hart's Toronto show will take place June 30 — a free, open-air festival gig with the capacity to squeeze in 3,000 fans.

When Corey Hart included Truth Will Set You Free on his 1988 album Young Man Running, few among his legions of fans likely realized that the song was intended as a gay-positive anthem of affirmation for anyone struggling with his or her sexuality.

For one thing, the Montreal-born pop star wanted it that way. He was intentionally cryptic in the lyrics of the soaring tune, couching the true meaning of its be-yourself-at-all-costs mantra in subtext. The reason for the secrecy? Hart wanted to protect the close friend who had inspired the song, someone whose sexuality was a source of self-doubt and pain.

Now, Hart is issuing a dance floor-friendly remix of the tune, one which swaps the contemplative soft-rock of the original for an icy club groove and pulls those themes that coursed under the original's surface to the fore with new lyrics inspired, in part, by the 1998 murder of gay university student Matthew Shepard.

And to make positively sure those newly prominent themes resonate, Hart — who willingly receded from the musical spotlight to raise his children — will mark his first Canadian performance in a decade during Toronto's Pride festival.

"The gay aspect of this song was an important message that I wanted to send out there, especially being a straight man — I thought it was important to say this," he added. "It was important for me to be at a gay pride event and to go out there and sing the song, and spread the message of the song."

But it certainly wasn't a typical journey to get to this point.

The idea to re-record his 24-year-old song began with an unsolicited email request from a DJ whom Hart had never heard of.

Love — whose real name is Paul Todd — wasn't writing in regard to either Sunglasses at Night or Never Surrender. Hart was intrigued, but it wasn't until he got to know Todd that he became persuaded to revisit the track. Todd was just a music lover from Kingston, Ont., who was driving a cab at night to support his four kids.

Even though Hart was initially a "little put off" with Todd's first attempt at tackling a new version of the song, their personalities clicked.

By then, Hart had made up his mind to issue his first single in 12 years. Hart felt that Todd's early remix didn't have enough musicality to it, so he sent it to musician friends in Toronto and Montreal who added textures until the gleaming song found its pulse. Perhaps more important to Hart was the opportunity to re-record his vocals with new lyrics. "I felt (it was) necessary to take the song much further than I had in 1988," Hart said.

William Shatner's weird world

Where no man has gone before. The 81-year-old icon gears up for another season of Weird or What?

From hosting the Junos in Ottawa to a multi-city U.S. tour of his Broadway show, William Shatner has been a man on the move for much of 2012 with a red-hot career that leaves little time for respite.

The week ahead is no exception as the Canadian pop culture icon prepares to head to Johannesburg for work with plans to eke out a few days for a photographic safari in the interior.

"I'm really excited by that. What I'm not excited about is a 22-hour airplane ride," the affable actor said candidly from his home in Los Angeles.

Despite his stacked schedule, the tireless 81-year-old continues to have a hands-on role with William Shatner's Weird or What? which is back for a third season beginning today at 10 p.m. ET on History Television. Shatner is host and executive producer of the series which explores true-life tales of the unknown and unexplainable, and features first-person accounts, expert commentary and reconstructions of the mysterious events in question.

In addition to narrating Weird or What? and delivering tongue-in-cheek quips onscreen, Shatner said he's active behind the scenes, consulting on stories and looking at scripts.

"It's more than just a couple of weeks of working on the show as the wrap-around. I'm intimately involved in the show, so there's no telling how much time that takes," he said.

Tonight's spine-tingling episode chronicles real-life accounts of human encounters with beastly creatures, including a New Jersey mother and son seeing the fabled Jersey Devil.

The "massively interesting" stories featured on Weird or What? all pique the interest of the inquisitive Shatner. Even as he peruses scripts, Shatner said he tries to seek out his own explanations for unusual happenings. He's also fascinated by the notions of multiple and alternate universes and the bending of time.

"Since we know nothing and everything is mysterious, the explanations for mysterious events assume an even more unknown quantity," said Shatner. "So we try to explain scientifically what may have happened in a mysterious event, but we can't be sure that that is the explanation."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

We're finally worried about Charlie Sheen

THE WORD
Monica Weymouth
scene@metronews.ca

Brooke Mueller has landed herself back in rehab, but the situation might not be as bad as it seems.

Despite a history of drug abuse and saying "I do" to Charlie Sheen, the sometimes-actress' lawyers say the stay is a perfectly routine "pre-planned event," and that reports of a crack-cocaine binge with her ex-husband are entirely false.

For his part, Sheen doesn't know who he agrees with just yet — but that doesn't mean he won't attempt to talk about it.

Here's his statement on the matter to TMZ: "I can't speak to anyone's opinion or judgement. I was there, they were not, their tepid hearsay is a baseless static drone."

"A mantra, their theme. I refuse to be held hostage by their 'constitutional privilege, to judge those who can and who do. nabobs. CS"

It took a while, but we are finally confused by the choices of Charlie Sheen. This man is a professional Drunkist Guy Last Night, and yet this is the statement he releases?

Charlie, this is familiar territory: sleep in, take a shower, throw on a little bronzer and surface in gym clothes with a leafy bag from Whole Foods. This showing-up-to-breakfast-in-sunglasses stuff is for amateurs.

Has he learned nothing?

When asked who will play him in the inevitable biopic, Bill Clinton generously settled on George Clooney during an interview on Piers Morgan Tonight.

Now, as for Hillary? He'd like to cast Meryl Streep.

We think this was a compliment, but Bill, trust us: assuming you're still around for a next time, the answer you are looking for here is "Angelina Jolie, Charlize Theron or a young Heidi Klum."

Amy Winehouse's family is taking another step in moving on after their daughter's death 10 months ago, putting the singer's London home up for sale, according to Reuters. "The Winehouse's have decided to put the house on the market, with great regret," a family spokesperson says. "Amy loved that house, but none of the family felt it appropriate that they should live in it and it was not practical to keep it empty while paying the costs of its upkeep." The home, which was previously intended to be the headquarters for the Amy Winehouse Foundation, is being offered for $4.2 million.

Justin Bieber

Justin Bieber takes a backstage tumble

Justin Bieber is recovering from a possible concussion and a bruised ego after walking into a glass wall backstage at a Paris concert, according to TMZ. The singer returned to the stage to finish his set, but he reportedly lost consciousness briefly backstage after the show. Local doctors diagnosed him with a concussion. Bieber is taking it well, though, posting on Twitter, "Just smacked my head and needed some water. All good. I'm Canadian. We are tough." This isn't the first time Bieber has been fooled by the translucent nature of glass walls and doors. Online video clips show him walking into the glass partition of a revolving door in 2010 and a glass wall at a radio station office later that year.

Got a big family? Here's how to save time and money

Have a daughter? Don't cut her bangs. Once you start cutting bangs, you're a slave to trimming them.

Don't buy bikes with white wheels. If you get your princess a pink bike with white wheels, little brother may be reluctant to take it on when sister outgrows it. Sacrifice glitter and ribbons for a good hand-me-down situation.

Have your babies close in age. This year, I had three kids on the SAME hockey team. This means only one rink at one time.

Don't cheap out on big-ticket items. If you buy your first kid a cheap bike, it's not going to get through the rest of your clan. You're better off buying top-quality baby products and sports equipment. JULIE COLE/YUMMYMUMMYCLUB.CA

Father's Day gift: The 52 Reasons I Love You Jar

Looking for the perfect Father's Day gift? The 52 Reasons I Love You Jar is a great idea! This is a three-ingredient activity that kids can make as a gift for Dad — that keeps giving.

Grab a jar, paper and crayons. Have your child write out 52 hand-written notes using the prompt "I love you because ..." (I love you because you take me to soccer, I love you because you tell fart jokes, I love you because you read to me ...)

Drop them into the jar. Dad can choose one note each week for the next year. This activity gives kids an opportunity to think about why Dad is special. It's a great way for kids to practice handwriting and brainstorming. And it's free! CAROLINE FERNANDEZ/YUMMYMUMMYCLUB.CA

When yes is better than no

First response. Saying no comes naturally when children ask for anything outside of the master plan, but it can stifle development

yummymummyclub.ca

"Mommy, let's have a picnic lunch under the dining room table.

"Why would we do that when we have a table?" I said without even looking up from my emails and piled-up paperwork.

"Why not?" asked my daughter.

I tore myself away from the screen to look at her. She was flushed with excitement. Even the ends of her hair seemed to be electrified as she bounced from foot to foot, imploring me with her cockeyed smile

"Sure, let's do it!" I said.

She was surprised by my answer. We ate, played games and giggled, and I was a much happier woman than I would have been had I remained hunched over my computer.

"Thank you," I said to my daughter.

"For what, Mommy?"

"For taking me on a picnic," I said. "Well, you should thank yourself, too. You're the one who said yes."

Parents usually go to "no" as a first response when their children ask for anything outside the master plan.

"No, I don't want you to build a cushion fort in the living room right now; it makes a huge mess."

I've done it. But if a child wants to build a fort or engage in any other activity that promises a transient mess, why not let him or her?

Your little one has an idea and exploring ideas is such an integral ingredient of our kids' development. How else are they going to figure out what works or how to solve their own problems?

Saying "no" comes naturally because we think doing so is without consequences. We're wrong. Not only do we limit our children's personal possibilities, we also compromise many opportunities to bond with them and to show them a different side of ourselves.

So, next time, consider going straight to "yes." I guarantee the experience will be as satisfying and memorable for you as if you had planned the whole thing yourself.

Weird baby names get even weirder

The folks at Nameberry compiled the hundred wackiest monikers from the last year.

We're talking weird — from the future troublemakers Capone and Juvenal, to Mother Nature's son, Cougar, Fox and Bear. Not to mention the badasses, Tank and Notorious, Marvellous, Famous and Tupac.

For cultural trends, it's Mad Men all the way, with six Draper kids released into the world. Homage to the late Dirty Dancer, Swayze. And Elvis is back (if he ever went away), as are the corresponding names Graceland, Presley and Memphis.

The Royal wedding appears to have left its mark, as the absurdly conjoined Princewilliam, Princemichael and Sircharles will attest.

While the calendar has historically provided baby name inspiration (April, June), it saw some new twists, including Tomorrow, Evening and Future.

Oh, and intoxicants featured, too: Tequila, Chardonnay and (I kid you not) Abeer. JULIE GREEN/YUMMYMUMMYCLUB.CA

3 LIFE

Health

Caesarean births linked to child obesity

New research published in the Archives of Disease in Childhood claims that C-sections may double the risk of childhood obesity. Big news, considering that around one in three babies are born this way in Canada.

The study followed 1,255 mothers and babies between 1999 and 2002. The babies were weighed at birth, six months and age three. Around one in four were C-sections, and those babies tended to weigh more than those from vaginal births.

According to researchers, there is the "difference in the composition of gut bacteria acquired at birth between the two delivery methods." Apparently babies born by C-section have more Firmicutes bacteria and fewer Bacteroides bacteria in their guts. (Obese people have higher levels of Firmicutes bacteria.) It is believed that gut bacteria influences insulin resistance, inflammation and fat deposits.

Another good reason to avoid elective, non-emergency Caesarean births.

Hearty halibut is a perfect match for spring veggies

Roasted Halibut with Quinoa and Vegetables

This recipe serves six. NEWS CANADA

1. Place quinoa in a rice cooker with 750 ml (3 cups) of water. Cook until tender and fluff with a fork.

2. Meanwhile, bring a large pot of salted water to a boil and prepare a bowl with ice water. Blanch asparagus, snap peas and sweet peas by placing them into the boiling water for about 1 minute for each batch. Strain and remove to ice water for another minute to stop the cooking.

Drain and set aside.

3. Remove quinoa from rice cooker, place in a large bowl and mix with oil, chives, tarragon and lemon rind. Season with salt and pepper.

4. Season halibut with salt and pepper and place on a parchment-lined baking sheet. Place a sprig of dill on each piece of fish; layer each with 3 to 4 lemon slices and top with 5 ml (1 tsp) of the butter. Splash with white wine and bake, uncovered, in centre of 190 C (375 F) oven for about 7 minutes.

5. Brown remaining butter in a pan over medium-high heat. Add lemon juice and blanched vegetables and toss quickly. Season to taste and add toasted almonds to vegetables. To serve, arrange quinoa and fish on a plate and spoon vegetables around and over the fish.

Ingredients

- 500 ml (2 cups) yellow quinoa, rinsed
- 500 g (1 lb) asparagus, stalks cut into 6 pieces on bias
- 1 l (4 cups) sugar snap peas, each cut into 4 pieces on bias
- 500 ml (2 cups) shelled green sweet peas
- 90 ml (1/3 cup) olive oil
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) finely chopped fresh chives

Catfish scaloppine teams with tomatoes for nutritious entrée

Catfish Scaloppine with Garlic Basil Sauce

This recipe makes two servings. NEWS CANADA

1. Place tomato slices on an ovenproof platter. Sprinkle with salt and pepper; drizzle with vinegar and set aside.

2. Place flour into a shallow dish. In a second shallow dish, whisk eggs with water. Place bread crumbs in a third shallow dish. Dip each catfish fillet into flour, shaking off excess. Dip into egg mixture followed by bread crumbs, pressing to coat well; place fillets onto plate.

3. In a large skillet, heat oil over medium-high heat. Cook fillets for about 5 minutes per side, until deep golden brown and fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Place fish fillets onto tomatoes and place platter in the centre of a 160 C (325

F) oven to keep warm.

4. Garlic Basil Sauce: Wipe out any excess oil from skillet and add butter. Return to medium heat and let butter melt and brown slightly. Immediately add garlic and basil leaves and swirl them in the pan or stir continuously to prevent from burning. As garlic softens and basil become crisp, add lemon juice and continue to stir ingredients together until well combined.

5. Remove pan from heat. Remove catfish and tomato platter from oven. Pour sauce over fish and serve.

He was also newly retired.

The mayor of the town donated a piece of land and Elio went to work, building 25 new homes for the families he had met. That was in 1990.

Today, Madonia and The Samaritan Group have built and donated 10 villages filled with 1,200 homes, six schools, five medical centres and 12 churches.

"We work a lifetime to acquire wealth. Then we look back and say, 'Is this all there

"Help those in need and leave a legacy that will influence the world."

Guide to life

Elio's personal mottos:

- Put God first at all times and in all things. You will discover that this is true wisdom.
- Let love motivate everything you do.
- In all relationships follow the golden rule: As you would like others to do to you, do likewise to them.
- In all dealings let fairness prevail.
- At all times protect your good name (reputation) for it is worth more than gold.

Become employable by fall

Get off the couch!

Make this summer count and employers may just give your resumé a second look

School's out and finally you can catch up on all your favourite soaps, take long naps throughout the day, and read up on the latest celebrity gossip. It sounds like a great plan and is definitely deserved, but you may want to look into activities that will boost your chances of securing a job this fall. Make the most of the summer with these suggestions.

Participate in a new activity.

Interesting facts about yourself on your resumé will make you stand apart from the crowd and can provide some friendly banter in the midst of an intense job interview.

Find a mentor.

Get in touch with a professor, relative, or friend who is working in a field that you're interested in. Then ask lots of questions about their career journey to learn how they got to where they are. It will inspire you to take steps in the right direction.

Make a difference.

Think outside the box and see if there is a way to use your skills to help others. Are you good at directions? Volunteer to drive and deliver meals to seniors and shut-ins. Are you great at planning events? Host a fundraiser for a cause you're passionate about. Volunteering will pay off in the long run as employers look fondly on individuals who show initiative and work hard. NEWS CANADA

Belmont Stakes

"It's all about the horse. As long as the horse is going great, we're all doing good. If he was battling and then I was getting a lot of stuff from other areas, it would be difficult. As long as he's doing good, everything else is just talk."

Doug O'Neill, the trainer of Canadian-owned I'll Have Another, is learning just how difficult it is to avoid all the roadblocks as he prepares his Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner for a chance to become the first Triple Crown champion in 34 years. The 44-year-old trainer shrugs off — at least publicly — the criticism thrown his way for numerous drug and medication violations, including a 45-day suspension issued last week in California. But ever since the colt was put on a van to New York, there have been a number of bumps on the road to the Belmont Stakes, such as a traffic jam on the New Jersey Turnpike. I'll Have Another will not be able to wear the nasal strip he wore when he won the Derby and Preakness. The horse also went without regular exercise rider Jonny Garcia until a week ago because of visa issues.

Doughty living his dream with the Kings

NHL. London native has been key in Los Angeles' 14-2 record on run to Stanley Cup

The seed was planted in Drew Doughty's mind long before he got this close to the summit.

As a kid who grew up worshipping the Los Angeles Kings, the slick defenceman always envisioned himself helping lead the organization to a Stanley Cup. In fact, general manager Dean Lombardi made it clear that was part of his expectation when he selected Doughty second overall in 2008.

"Before I was even drafted I had a ton of meetings with the L.A. Kings staff," Doughty recalled Sunday at the Kings practice facility. "Every single one of those meetings, Dean always brought it up to me: 'Are you going to be that guy to help us win that first Stanley Cup in franchise history?'"

"My answer was always 'Yes.'"

The Kings are oh-so-close to making it a reality.

With a pair of 2-1 overtime victories over the New Jersey Devils to open the championship series, Los Angeles flew back across the continent with an opportunity to wrap it up at Staples Center. This is bordering on fantasyland stuff for Doughty, who grew up in London as a Kings fanatic and owned small black-and-silver replica sweaters bearing the names "Gretzky" and "Hrudey."

Those two men were key players in the Kings' only other previous trip to the Stanley Cup final, which ended with a five-game loss to Montreal in 1993.

The current group has gone further than any team in the franchise's 44-year history. Doughty's contributions have been impossible to ignore throughout the playoffs and he's taken it to another level at the most important time — logging a team-high 32 minutes of ice time in Game 2 and scoring a highlight-reel goal to boot.

"I'm having a lot of fun right now," said Doughty. "This is the biggest time of the year."

These are exciting times for a Kings team that has steamrolled its competition and only dropped two games since the regular season ended in early April. It would take an upset of historic proportions for New Jersey to win the series.

"We really believe we can win a game tomorrow night," Devils coach Peter DeBoer said. "If we do, it's a different series."

Added veteran goalie Martin Brodeur: "I think we're heading in the right direction."

Los Angeles seemed to be bracing for a party as the Kings arrived back in town early Sunday morning, with a host on the local KTLA morning news boldly predicting "we're going to have a parade by Friday."

That means she was projecting a four-game sweep.

Players have already started to see a number of changes around town. Numerous electronic billboards reading "Go Kings!" dot the streets while the anonymity they once enjoyed has started to disappear.

"Now that we're winning, you can just see how the fanbase is turning," said Doughty.

Commanding lead

There's no denying how commanding the Kings' position is.

- Of the last six Stanley Cup finals that began with the road team winning the opening two games, five ended in sweeps. The other was over in five games.

- Only two NHL teams — the 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs and 1966 Montreal Canadiens — have lifted the Stanley Cup after losing the opening two games of the final on home ice.

- However, Devils coach Peter DeBoer wanted no part of that discussion.

He pointed out to his players that they haven't been dominated by the Kings and actually had a good effort in Game 2 — essentially falling one Ilya Kovalchuk crossbar short of tying the series.

Golf. Woods matches Nicklaus for career wins

With a remarkable rally even by his standards, Tiger Woods birdied three of his last four holes to win the Memorial on Sunday and match tournament host Jack Nicklaus with his 73rd title on the PGA Tour.

Woods was one shot behind and looking at a probable bogey in deep rough behind the 16th green when he chipped in from 50 feet for birdie to tie for the lead. In the group behind him, Rory Sabbatini made bogey from the bunker on the 16th hole and never caught up.

Jays top Red Sox to avoid sweep

Pitching. Hutchison followed up the best start of his career by allowing only one run and striking out five

The Blue Jays took advantage of an erratic Daniel Bard to score five runs in the first two innings and avoid a sweep by the visiting Boston Red Sox Sunday afternoon, defeating their AL East rivals 5-1 in front of 41,925 at the Rogers Centre.

Jose Bautista hit his 14th homer of the season — a towering shot off the facing of the second deck — and starter Drew Hutchison pitched seven strong innings to lead the Jays.

Bautista's bomb, his second in as many games, came on a 3-and-2 fastball in the first inning after Bard walked his first two batters and gave the Jays an early 3-0 lead.

Bautista was a little early on Bard's first full-count fastball — nailing it just west of the left-field foul pole — and was a little behind his next one, slicing it behind him. But he made no mistake when Bard went after him a third time, turning hard on the pitch and launching it to left field.

It was the only hit Bard would give up, but the Red Sox right-hander, struggling this season in his conversion from the bullpen, was incredibly wild, walking six and plunking two of the 13 batters he faced, allowing five runs over just 1 2/3 innings.

He led off both his innings by walking the first two batters he faced, and allowed the Jays' fourth and fifth runs on walks and hit batters. Designated hitter Edwin Encarnacion stayed in the game after getting hit on his hand in the second inning, but did not take another at-bat. There was no word immediately after the game whether or not he was injured.

Hutchison was coming off the best performance of his young career — when he gave up three hits through seven innings in Monday's 6-2 win over the Baltimore Orioles — and he followed up in much the same way on Sunday, allowing one run on five hits while striking out five and walking one.

Red Sox catcher Kelly Shopach homered in the fifth to nix Hutchison's shutout, but the only time the Jays' 21-year-old starter had two runners on he induced an infield pop-up to Adrian Gonzalez.

Known more for his command and control than his power, Hutchison added some oomph to his fastball in his last outing against the O's, touching 95 on the radar gun for the first time.

Jays manager John Farrell explained that Hutchison gained the extra velocity by generating more power with his legs and driving harder toward the plate with his lower half. But the more powerful step toward home didn't change his throwing mechanics, Farrell said.

"He was able to accomplish it while still staying within his normal delivery, which is the most encouraging thing of all." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

2012 MLB draft

The Blue Jays will pick 17th and 22nd when the major league draft gets underway Monday.

- Toronto gets the 22nd pick as compensation for failing to sign last year's first-rounder, pitcher Tyler Beede. And they'll face a new set of rules aimed at restricting bonus money.

- In previous years, some high-end players would insist on such huge contracts that only the richest teams would bother drafting them. Now each team has a limit, with severe penalties for spending more.

Top-seeded Djokovic shaky in French Open victory

Novak Djokovic of Serbia returns in his fourth-round match against Andreas Seppi of Italy at the French Open on Sunday. BERNAT ARMANGUE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Novak Djokovic won even though he felt like nothing was working.

A much less-known player named David Goffin lost, but he walked out of Roland Garros feeling like the luckiest guy in the world. It was a strange, grey Sunday at the French Open that didn't always fit the script — and even included an early exit by the top-seeded woman, Victoria Azarenka.

The top-seeded man, Djokovic, punctuated the weirdness, in need of his third career comeback from two sets down to post a fourth-round victory over 22nd-seeded Andreas Seppi of Italy, 4-6, 6-7 (5), 6-3, 7-5, 6-3.

"Today, I played a very poor match," Djokovic said.

Goffin, in the draw as a "lucky loser" after falling in qualifying, found himself with a one-set lead against none other than his childhood favourite, Roger Federer, before falling 5-7, 7-5, 6-2, 6-4. At the end, the 21-year-old got a hug from the 16-time major champion that left him smiling.

"I've had an extraordinary week," he said. "I went through the qualifiers with a bit of luck. Then I played my best tennis. I played three great matches. The icing on the cake was to play

Other than the fact that he grinded it out and won, and that his hopes of winning his fourth straight Grand Slam tournament — the "Novak Slam" — are still alive, Djokovic conceded there wasn't much to build on from this win, his 25th straight in the majors.

"I'm not worried," he said. "I'm just hoping that I can wake up tomorrow morning knowing that I'm in the quarter-finals. Forget this match today. Take the best out of it, which is that I'm proud I've been fighting, coming from two sets down." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Daniel Nestor

Canadian Daniel Nestor and Belarusian partner Max Mirnyi reached the quarter-finals of the French Open on Sunday with a 6-2, 6-4 defeat of American Scott Lipsky and Rajeev Ram.

- The 39-year-old from Toronto will play in the semifinals against Australian Matthew Ebden and American partner Ryan Harrison.

Scott Dixon won IndyCar's Detroit Grand Prix that was marred by poor track conditions that stopped the race for a little more than two hours on Sunday. A red flag halted the event 45 laps into a race that was scheduled for 90 laps and shortened to 60.

Belle Isle's 2.07-mile road course that hadn't hosted a race since 2008 had chunks of asphalt and concrete missing. Pot holes and grooves that were recently filled with tar became exposed. Crews filled the gaps with epoxy that settled enough for the race to resume. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sudoku

How to play

Fill in the grid, so that every row, every column and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1-9. There is no math involved. You solve the puzzle with reasoning and logic.

Weekend's Sudoku

Horoscope

♈ Aries | March 21 - April 20.

Someone is about to find out just how much you dislike being taken advantage of.

♉ Taurus | April 21 - May 21.

Trust your own abilities, and trust that fate is still on your side.

♊ Gemini | May 22 - June 20.

Someone you live or work with seems to be under the impression that each time they do something wrong you will forgive them. It may have been true in the past but it's not true today.

♋ Cancer | June 21 - July 22.

Keep tasks to a minimum today and think before you act. Or don't act at all.

♌ Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Before you make that purchase ask yourself if you really need it.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22.

The planets suggest that little things will be more important than big things today, so focus on the kind of details that others tend to overlook. On the home front especially your keen eye will spot danger quickly.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22.

Everyone makes mistakes — yes, even a Libra — so put it down to experience and get on with your life.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov.

21. How do you turn good ideas into cash? That is the problem you will need to resolve over the next few days, but you must not be rash about it.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec.

21. Yes, it's true, someone has taken advantage of you, but seeking revenge isn't the answer. Today's eclipse in your sign urges you to forgive those who have done you wrong. But don't forget or they may do it again.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan

20. The message of the stars for Capricorn this week is that not even someone as driven as you can change the world on your own

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb 18.

You must stick with the task or project you are working on, no matter how slowly it may be progressing.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20.

Although you are under a lot of pressure at the moment you will find ways to deal with it. Pisces is an adaptable sign, so if one way does not seem to be working for you just try something else.
